INTRODUCTORY NOTE

This is the first attempt to document all Scottish records, national, native and all-comers', men and women, outdoors and indoors. Further research will be carried out and this publication will be corrected and refined in future updates. This is particularly the case on the women's side which was very poorly documented for many years. I know there are inconsistencies in the way women's records were reported in newspapers and programmes over the years. If anyone has any information, corrections or queries, no matter how small, please contact me at historian@scottishathletics.org.uk.

BACKGROUND

Official Scottish athletics records have been in existence since the very first list was established in November 1886. The following edited detail of the development of Scottish records was published in the centenary history of the Scottish Amateur Athletic Association, Scottish Athletics by John W. Keddie in 1982.

Claimants to Scottish track and field records were not unknown prior to the organisation of the Scottish Amateur Athletic Association in 1883. To some extent there was disharmony at that time between the West of Scotland A.A.A. and the Scottish A.A.A. which was considered an east of Scotland body. Scottish records achieved under the auspices of the W.S.A.A.A. were viewed rather sceptically in the east. Especially after the marriage of these associations in 1884 there were pressures to establish authentic Scottish record performances for the standard events. Thus, in September 1886, the S.A.A.A. appointed a Records Sub-Committee whose purpose was to issue an initial list of approved records. Claims were put to the committee, with relevant support, and, in November 1886, a record list was issued covering the following events:

100 yards, 120 yards, 150 yards, 440 yards, 880 yards, 1 mile, all distances from 3 to 10 miles, 120 yards hurdles, high jump, long jump, hammer, shot putt, pole vault, and 1 to 3 miles walks.

In only one instance was a pre-1883 performance passed-Tom Vallance's 21'11" long jump at the Queen's Park F.C. Sports in 1881. Rumblings of discontent were heard from the west about aspects of the list, especially the non-acceptance of a 51 .2 440 achieved by T.G. Connell (West of Scotland F.C.) at Kilmarnock F.C. Sports of 1882. The track measurement had been verified and everything seemed to be in order, but there was apparently some doubt about the scratch mark and the performance never received an official imprimatur.

Needless to say clear criteria needed to be set out in this area, and the first real move in that direction came in January 1888 when the Records Committee stated that 'in future any competitor who considers that he has established a record, must forthwith lodge full particulars with the Records Sub-Committee, who will consider his claim'. In addition, it was required that all courses were to be measured 12 inches from the inside of the track and not 18 inches as was apparently the practice in some places. This rule still exists today as 0.3 metres (Rule 160 in IAAF Rules). At the A.G.M. held on 28th March, 1892, it was agreed that the following additional particulars be lodged: (a) a certificate by a Civil Engineer that the track was properly measured; (b) a report by the timekeeper of the accuracy of the time; and (c) a report by the referee or a judge that the performance was properly accomplished.

Initially there was only one class of records, which was not restricted to Scots. In 1893 a list of 'Scottish Holders' was separated from 'All-comers' (where different). In fact there were only a very few records by non-Scots in the pre-1893 lists. From 1894 up to the Second World War, there were basically two categories of records. First of all there were the 'All-comers' records, with, secondly, an additional list of records set by 'those having the Championship qualification' where different from the 'All-comers' records. This was unchanged between 1894 and 1932 with only one modification in connection with the 'Championship qualification'. From the beginning the Championships were confined to Scotsmen or those of other nationalities who had been resident in Scotland in the three months preceding the date of the Championship meeting. This residential qualification for those of 'other nationalities' was altered in 1912 to six months' residence.

A change came about in 1932-33 by which the classification 'Native Record' first appeared. Instead of a mere 'Championship qualification' it then became the rule that besides 'All-comers' records 'records made by Scotsmen' were to be retained (where differing from the All-comers' records). The definition given to the term 'Scotsmen' was 'one who has acquired Scottish Nationality or whose paternal parent is of Scottish Nationality by birth or has acquired such by adoption'. (1933 Constitution, Laws, III (a)) This certainly clarified one point which probably had led to some confusion. Before 1933 there were actually no Scottish 'Native' records as such. As the qualification for records (besides All-comers' records) involved merely a residential stipulation as distinct from Scottish Nationality, many Scottish 'records'- 'National' or 'Native' records - could have been set by someone of any nationality, given the residential qualification. No specific Native-Scottish lists existed. Not many non-Scots appeared in the record lists, however.

Of course in the early years there was undoubtedly less movement in society from one area to another or from one country to another and there tended to be more emigration from Scotland than there was immigration. However, one can appreciate that the 1883-1933 period was less cut and dried as regards Scottish 'Native' records than subsequently.

In addition there are requirements for records besides mere nationality and in this respect there has been little change over the past 100 years. Basically these requirements can be summarised thus:

- (1) certification of the specifications of tracks, measurement, gradient etc.;
- (2) verification of the accuracy of times/distances with details as to time-keepers' qualifications, watches and measuring equipment;
- (3) report of referee as regards details of competition, race, and prevailing conditions;
- (4) in addition, since before the First World War, there have been regulations relating to wind conditions. The limit of allowable wind assistance for sprints, hurdles and jumps has been established at 2 metres per second (approximately 4 miles per hour), though often in the past, before the presence of wind-gauges at meetings, mere human judgement was the criterion. In this way the performances of W.L. Hunter (120y Hu, 15.4, 1914), A.F. Clark (120y Hu, 15.6, 1929/31), F.P. Reid (100y, 9.6, 1933), R. Murdoch (220y, 21.6, 1933) and I.C. Young (100y, 9.8, 1935) were disallowed. It has only been in more recent times, relatively speaking, that gauges have become a common feature at major meetings. In fact, a wind gauge was first used in the S.A.A.A. Championships of 1949, having been donated earlier that year by a Flight Lt. A.R. Mitchell.

Undoubtedly since the Second World War there have been increasing changes in the regulations governing records, together with a growing interest in record breaking performances. Records rather effectively demonstrate the development within the particular events, although they cannot reveal anything about the conditions under which they were set-as to prevailing patterns of training, facilities enjoyed, climatic conditions faced, or the state and nature of the tracks, jumping pits, or throwing areas. As suggested earlier even clothing and footwear styles will play their part. The increased stringency of record rules is implicit in the fact that the 'Rules for Records' in the 1982 Handbook are covered in 18 sections, whereas in 1897 there were only five 'Rules' all encompassed within the space of a brief paragraph!

Between 1933 and 1955 there were no changes in the rules governing records. However, at the A.G.M. of 17th December, 1955, the qualification for Scottish Native records was reduced to those 'born in Scotland' only. Three years later (at the A.G.M. of 20th December, 1958) this was again extended to those 'of Scottish parentage', only being different from the 1933 Rule in that there was no limitation to the 'paternal parent'. In the sixties numerous changes took place. In 1961 the nomenclature for records was altered from 'Native' to 'National'. Three years later came the first distinction between National records 'made in Scotland' and those 'made Furth of Scotland', the latter representing performances made outwith Scotland by Scotsmen which were superior to those made within Scotland. This did not really operate satisfactorily as it was not sensible to keep a separate list of 'Furth of Scotland Records' which might be poorer than performances set within Scotland. Thus in 1968 (A.G.M. of 21st December, 1968) the position was clarified with the introduction, or rather re-introduction, of a Native record category for performances set within Scotland by Scots-born athletes. The National records category was understood as embracing best performances by Scots achieved anywhere in the world, including Scotland. Not only Scots-born athletes could qualify for the latter but also those either of whose parents had been born in Scotland. In 1972 this was further extended to athletes who regarded themselves as Scottish athletes for International competition though not falling within the other two categories, always provided they did not render themselves ineligible to compete for Scotland, such as those who chose to run for another country.

Apart from these developments there have also been changes in the events recognised for record purposes and in 1969/70 there was the transition to metric distances and the corresponding demise of the old imperial distances and measurements. It was not in fact until 1939 that a distinction was made between 'Standard Events' and 'Other Events'. The former more or less corresponded to the Championship events and the latter to unusual distances or field events. This distinction between 'Standard' and 'Other' persisted, with only periodic revision according to changing concepts of what constitutes 'Standard' events. Since the re-formation of a Scottish Athletics Record Committee in 1989, the events at which records are recognised has been streamlined and, with the odd exception, now relate to events at which championships are contested.

Following the opening of the Kelvin Hall Arena in Glasgow towards the end of 1987, indoor competition developed rapidly and in 1989, a separate set of indoor records was created covering the same categories as the outdoor.

One anomaly arising was the fact that such great 'Scottish' athletes as A.R. Downer, W. Halswelle, and E.H. Liddell – and, more recently, such as Tom Hanlon, Allison Curbishley etc - would not have qualified for Native records as they were all born outside Scotland. The performances of Downer, Halswelle, and Liddell would of course have qualified for National records. With the increasing movement through ease of travel and flexibility of work, more Scottish athletes were born outside of Scotland although considering themselves Scottish. In 2002, there was a change to the Native record extending the athletes who could set a Native record from those 'born in Scotland' to those with a Scottish qualification. The length of residence in Scotland to gain a Scottish qualification has been increased to three years.

WOMEN'S RECORDS

The above narrative related to men's athletics and, in particular, the Scottish Amateur Athletic Association. The Scottish Women's Amateur Athletic Association was not formed until 1930 with the first national championships held in 1931. The timelines of women's records lists are hazy but for the purposes of this publication, I have taken Scottish records (native) as commencing at the end of the first year of organised women's athletics in 1931. The split between national and native records and the introduction of all-comers' records came later and since the merging of the SAAA and SWAAA, the records are now aligned.

To summarise, we now have the following categories:

SCOTTISH NATIONAL RECORD: for a performance made in or outwith Scotland by a competitor who was born in Scotland, or either of whose parents was born in Scotland, or who has been recognised by Scottish Athletics as eligible through three years continuous residence to be a Scottish athlete for international competition, provided that athlete has not rendered him/herself ineligible to compete for Scotland.

SCOTTISH NATIVE RECORD: for a performance made in Scotland by a competitor who was born in Scotland, or either of whose parents was born in Scotland, or who has been recognised by the Scottish Athletics as eligible through three years continuous residence to be a Scottish athlete for international competition, provided that athlete has not rendered him/herself ineligible to compete for Scotland.

SCOTTISH ALL-COMERS' RECORD: For a performance made in Scotland by a competitor irrespective of their nationality or place of birth.

INTRODUCTION TO RECORD LISTS

In the following lists of records, a number of explanatory notes are necessary:

- (i) Initially, when the men's records commenced in 1886, there was just the one category 'Scottish records' which covered any performances set in Scotland. These have been categorised as all-comers' records.
- (ii) Records at events which are no longer recognised as records are listed after the currently recognised records.
- (iii) Up until the conversion to metric distances in 1969, the field event records have been shown as they were originally measured, i.e. in feet and inches.
- (iv) Where there is a clear link between linear and metric events, e.g. 100 yards and 100 metres, the records have been combined within the one event.
- (v) In some cases, what appear to be authentic performances were not ratified because the performance had been bettered by the time of the meeting to ratify; in such cases, I have included the performance in italics.
- (vi) Female athletes who have set records under both their maiden name and their married name are listed with the name they competed under at the time of the record. In the index, all records set are listed under their maiden name.

These lists deal with senior records only and will be updated each time new records are ratified.
